Sakina lived peacefully with her joint family until violence in Sendhwa shattered her world. She was stunned to receive a demolition notice, accusing her jailed son, Shahbaz, of riots—despite his 35-day incarceration. Within minutes, bulldozers arrived, leaving her no time to gather essentials. Helpless, she watched as authorities tore down part of her home. When Miles2Smile visited, Sakina sobbed, overwhelmed by injustice and fear of further police action. With her son still in jail and her home in ruins, she requested only his release and help to rebuild.
